FOCUSFLOW

Brand Guidelines

Version 1.0 — Demonstration Document

1. Brand Overview

FocusFlow is a fictional productivity software brand that helps small business teams organize priorities and plan their work.

Its communication should make work feel more understandable and manageable without promising unrealistic outcomes.

2. Brand Mission

Help teams organize their priorities, understand their next steps, and approach their work with greater clarity.

3. Target Audience

Our primary audience includes small business teams, project managers, and professionals who want a more organized approach to planning.

4. Brand Voice

Clear: Use direct language that communicates one idea at a time.

Friendly: Sound helpful and approachable rather than aggressive or intimidating.

Practical: Focus on everyday situations and useful next steps.

Professional: Maintain a respectful tone without unnecessary jargon.

5. Preferred Language

Use everyday English and short, readable sentences.

Prefer phrases such as:

- Organize your priorities.
- Plan your next step.

- Explore a clearer approach.
- Make room for meaningful work.
- Discover features that fit your workflow.

6. Prohibited Language and Claims

- Never guarantee productivity improvements or business success.
- Do not claim that FocusFlow eliminates every workplace problem.
- Avoid invented customer testimonials, reviews, or statistics.
- Do not make unsupported medical or psychological claims.
- Do not invent certifications, awards, or endorsements.
- Do not use manipulative urgency or misleading scarcity claims.

7. Messaging Principles

Explain features accurately and connect them to realistic user needs.

Make it clear when a statement describes a feature rather than a guaranteed outcome.

Encourage prospective customers to explore the product and decide whether it suits their workflow.

8. Calls to Action

Appropriate calls to action include:

- Explore how it works.
- Discover the available features.
- Start planning your next step.
- Learn more about FocusFlow.

Avoid calls to action that promise guaranteed results.

9. Content Formatting

Use concise paragraphs, descriptive headings, and readable sentences.

Social media hooks should focus on one clear idea. Email copy should include a useful subject line and a respectful closing.

10. Brand Compliance

All campaign materials should follow these guidelines.

If a claim cannot be supported, rewrite it in neutral language. Human review is required before publishing marketing content
